Kris Chase-Byrne

Live music and dance piece inspired by Surrealism

Kris is a multi-instrumentalist and composer based in Solihull. Primarily a keyboard player/pianist, his practice and abilities cross many genres and some draw influence from minimalist improvisation through to pop/rock piano, mom contemporary classical, jazz and more.

As a composer he has written for independent film, theatre, choirs, Wh songwriting and likes to draw from multiple genres and styles and combine big these elements within all areas of composition.

Alongside this, improvisation is a huge passion, with Kris believing there is something really powerful about music being created right within a moment.

As a performer, he is always keen to try any kind of music making on offer. Whether that is playing in a cocktail bar with a singer, to playing piano in a big band, contemporary jazz funk band or playing as part of a classical ensemble, Kris' passion for making music and performing has enabled his practice to comfortably slot into any performing situation.
