Amy Leigh Sandford

'What do you see?', performance art piece

Amy Leigh Sandford is a working class Brummie actress who graduated with a Masters in Acting from the Royal Birmingham Conservatoire in 2021 and has since been fortunate enough to work on and create some amazing projects.

Some of her most recent credits include 'Trust' by Liz John, Grumpy Old Scrooge (Rage Arts) and her self-written show 'That's Class', which debuted at the festival last year. Alongside performing, she is the owner and prinicpal of Legacy School of Performing Arts, a performing arts

- school based in Walsall. Sandford is delighted to share her piece 'What do you see?', a one-woman piece exploring our ever-changing imaginations and how our perception of the world changes as we grow older. It has been an enlightening and rewarding experience for her and she hopes this piece encourages the audience to embrace their childhood curiosity and let their imagination run free.
